

Weapons In Space

There are Already Weapons Launched into Space

At the above link you can see 'John Walson's Mystery Space Machines' Pts. 1-18. These are real photographs of crafts which have not yet been publicly declared or classified. They are astonishing photographs and videos. Who knows what they are?

There are already weapons launched into space. American satellites are so powerful that, according to some articles I read, China aims ground based lasers at them to neutralize them when they pass over China. There has been some speculation that the lasers have possibly done some permanent damage to the satellites, but it's believed by some the satellites are rendered rather ineffective when hit by these lasers.

For those who don't know this, General Motors bought a series of special 702 line satellites from Hughes Corp. which can fly low satellite altitude, which isn't all that far above the earth's surface, considering the dreadful infra red radar crap they now have.

The orbits of these new birds are prevented from decaying by using a special new solar powered xenon-ion propulsion system to boost them back up to speed occasionally, since they ride just above the edge of the atmosphere and probably encounter some drag, so they are like perpetual, monstrous radiating devices with invisible stilts which keep them just aloft above us, perched atop of us from birth to death.

The plan, according to some sources, is to be able to track us all when we are "chipped" with microchips, and some medical doctors have stated they believe the satellites can do more than just track those who are chipped.

Remember the DNA fuss about Hillary Clinton's original health plan? Remember how her (power-hungry?) mentality wants to keep all those who are on government health programs in one general place, anchored to the same doctors and caregivers?

With a person's DNA on file and a microchip embedded in the body, folks won't be going anywhere the thought police don't want them to go, in such a "Billary" Clinton future world.

The new 702's are only part of the space-based weaponry already in orbit. Count the pulsed laser the space shuttles aim back at the earth, as well, and don't forget the H.A.A.R.P. weapon sites at Alaska and Ca., which some believe partly responsible for much of the global warming and severe weather phenomena, and possibly earthquakes as well. What in the hell gives man the right to blast billions of megawatts of microwave into the atmosphere, disrupting nature's plan, like the H.A.A.R.P. device does?

If you experience ear ringing, head or skull pressure, especially when you fire up your computer, it could be possible you may be under satellite surveillance which can also track you in real time, especially if you carry driver licenses and credit cards with magnetic strips on them. You have to put stuff like that and cellphones in lead lined bags like government intelligence agents do to keep from being tracked by satellites by s*#t-head Bush and co.. What a bunch of a$$h01*s we have for Congresspersons and chief executives. They've sold out the American People for decades.
